

In this essay I am going to be arguing in defence of killing cane toads. I have read many articles that tell me that the animals are regarded as poisonous pests. They have persuaded me that these menacing, monster like creatures should be killed. I will also be considering those arguments in defence of these creatures, however my main viewpoint is that these pests should die.

From all my research looking at these cunning cane toads it is evident that these vile, vicious creatures are destroying the native species of Australia. They need to be stopped. They must be eliminated immediately. Even though, as animals they should be treated equally, it is essential that these deadly devils deserve to die. Cane toads are, "big ugly creatures" (Muller, 2006) which have wild warts all over their body they were imported into Australia in 1935 to keep the population of cane beetles down and protect the cane sugar. Unfortunately this didn't go to plan as the population grew rapidly.

Essentially, should the cane toads be eradicated? According to the Queensland pollution shore Keith, cane toads are a
